FBI REFUSES TO REVEAL LOCATION OF LOOT IN CROYDON

Eight Persons Are Now Under Arrest, It is Stated By Police

PROBE NOT FINISHED

Additional Arrests Are Expected As Investigation Progresses

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16—(INS)—Eight persons were under arrest today as the Federal Bureau of Investigation announced it had cracked a $30,000 truck hi-jacking, and recovered part of the loot in Bucks County.

The stolen material—scarce woolen goods—was found in a secluded barn near Croydon.

An FBI agent said this morning—however—that he could not reveal the exact spot of the barn “because we are still working on the case.”

“We are not ready to say if the owner was involved,” he continued, “and any such announcement would be premature.”

He pointed out that all the details in the case were not entirely solved, and that disclosure of the barn owner’s name might hamper further investigation or unduly involve him. “We just aren’t ready to reveal his name yet,” he emphasized.

All those under arrest so far are Philadelphians, but L. V. Boardman, agent-in-charge of the Philadelphia office of the FBI, said:

“The solution of this case also has resulted in solving other recent hijackings in this area.”

“Additional arrests are expected and additional loot is expected to be recovered.”

The FBI would not comment on whether or not the “additional loot” was believed to be hidden also in Bucks County.

The woolen-laden truck was stolen October 3 as it was about to leave

SAMUEL B. PETTENGILL
“The Gentleman from Indiana”

When the perplexing case of Who Caused the Housing Shortage had the nation completely baffled, there was nothing left but to call in Sherlock Holmes.

When the great detective arrived at the White House and was told what he was asked to solve, he expressed great annoyance. “What?” he said, “you have called me away from my investigation of the international mystery of Who Won the War to spend my time with such a trifling as this?”

It was plain that this unexpected statement rocked the Cabinet back on its heels. The Attorney General was the first to regain his poise.

“But, my dear Mr. Sherlock Holmes, it is not a trifling. All our experts have found no clue, even the F. B. I.”

“Experts, bah,” Holmes spat out, but then he glanced at his watch. “Well, as my plane cannot return to London for another hour, I will explain the obvious to the addled. You have one really good department hidden in your vast caverns of official misinformation—the Census Bureau. Let me see its last housing report.”

The document, already gathering dust, although its date was as recent as May 16, 1946, was handed him.

The world renowned sleuth fingered its paper. “Ah, just as I thought. See here.”

TREND OF SAVINGS

No one has ever worried about having too much money saved, whether on deposit in banks or invested in government bonds or life insurance. But the accumulated savings of the American people during the last few years have given rise to a theory that such savings are "oversavings," contributing to economic instability. Donald B. Woodward, an executive of a large life insurance company, recently labeled that theory a misconception.

Speaking before the American Life Convention in Chicago, Mr. Woodward said:

"The proportion of income saved by the American people has not changed over decades—except during the war when shortage of goods compelled much involuntary saving. And already, although goods are still short, the rate of saving is rapidly declining from the extraordinary war levels, and there is reason to believe that it shortly will return at least to the level which prevailed for decades."

Such a trend may occasion relief among diagnosticians of the condition of the national economy insofar as such surplus purchasing power—calling for some remedial "siphoning off"—reflected swollen national credit, with too much money in circulation and a growing danger of inflation. This consideration has been further accentuated by low interest rates on government and private securities as well as bank deposits. But that inflationary aspect appears to be on the wane with the release of consumer goods at consistently high prices and the momentum of postwar buying.

Indeed, there are signs that, instead of saving, many persons are spending beyond their means, particularly in view of the uncertainty of the future and indicated conservation of individual financial reserves. Talk of a depression may be premature but an industrial recession, necessitating individual retrenchment in many cases, may come as production catches up with demand for consumer goods, with a consequent decline of employment.

In that event, accumulated savings will be a lifesaver for many wage-earners. Obviously, money then will buy more than at present. A change in the economic weather may again prove the proverbial wisdom of putting something aside for a rainy day.

G. O. P. GETS RESULTS

But when the Republican leaders showed how the budget could be balanced at a much lower figure—low enough to cut taxes again and still pay off some of the national debt, the White House tune changed.

Recently there have been many heartening promises of "economy." There have even been intimations that the Federal government might be able to struggle along without a few of the two million or so extra help hired to "win the war"—and most obviously no longer needed now that the war is over.

If, as the President now promises, the budget is going to be balanced, clearly the thanks for this accomplishment is due to the Republican, and not the Democratic, party.

There was another recent instance of how a sound Republican position vindicated itself—and did it the hard way only because the White House resisted so strongly. That is in the matter of the draft.

A year or so ago the President demanded permanent peace-time conscription. This was the first time in the nation's history that a militaristic suggestion of the sort had ever been made under such circumstances.

The Republican leaders replied that if army service were made more attractive, and if the discriminations against the enlisted men were wiped out, voluntary enlistments might easily be more than enough for needs.

A draft law incorporating these ideas was passed by Congress. It called for a "draft holiday" during which the voluntary enlistment system might be given a tryout.

To hear the White House reaction, one would have thought that Congress had voted to surrender to Stalin. The plan was declared to be unthinkable. It would "weaken our position" in world affairs. So it was vetoed.

Yet only a few days ago a "draft holiday" was declared. Selective service is over for a period of months. Why? Because what the Republicans had predicted had come true—because when problems of "rank" and pay were cured in the military service, voluntary enlistments became more than enough for current military needs.

But there is another field of service rendered by the Republicans which may loom even larger to future historians than it does to contemporary observers.

This is the stubborn Republican fight against Communism.

The Red Tide had risen high in America. The Communists had infiltrated deep into our system. Powerful voices were using their influence to prevent individuals or organizations from attacking the Red menace.

It would have been simple enough for the Republican Party to have done what the Pennsylvania Democrats actually did—pretended that "Communism is not an issue."

But the Republican leaders wanted no party victory based on the defeat of Americanism.

The issue of Communism has been carried to the battleground of the Congressional elections from coast to coast; and there is no voter today who is not aware that the only safe way of fighting off Communism is to vote for the one party which the Communists so obviously fear—the Republican Party.

The results of this open fight on the Communist Fifth-Column in the United States already are conspicuous, well ahead of the election.

The Communists are running for cover. They are hunting storm cells until the tempest blows over.

Within the ranks of the CIO-PAC set-up, which consists of hundreds of thousands of well-intended American citizens who have been "taken over" by a handful of pro-Communists at the top, revolts are flaring against the Communistic dictatorship.

Here and there in the Federal government, voices like that of G. Edgar Hoover, FBI head, are tardily being raised to confirm the danger. Men like New York's Democratic Mayor O'Dwyer publicly admit that damaging strikes are run by Communists.

No one who has watched recent history in the making can fail to note that the PAC's hand in political affairs has been stayed. Much can happen between now and election—but there is a mighty difference between the work being done now by PAC, and that of two years ago.

The Republican Party may have beaten Communism merely by running against it.

The Cabinet sprang to its feet and gathered around him. He read: "From April 1940 to November 1945, five and a half years, the number of housing units inhabited by only one person increased 30 percent; the two-person units increased 22 percent; the six, seven and eight person dwelling units decreased in like proportion. The thing is elementary. I'm glad I left Dr. Watson in London. I wouldn't want him to put this silly case in his Baker Street Memoirs."

Still the Cabinet was in the dark. "But what do the figures prove, Mr. Holmes?" "They prove," Holmes shouted, "that more rental dwelling space is being occupied, per person, than ever before. They prove that the housing shortage is mostly one of those hallucinations that have swept over North America, from witchcraft down to Ponzi and the Florida real estate boom where so many of your countrymen went broke because they refused to look at the obvious. The housing shortage, my dear sirs, except in some war bride towns, was caused right here in Washington, D. C., one of your alphabets—O. P. A. I believe you call it. You've called it so many things that I'm not sure of the initials.

"By artificially holding rents down to the point where rents took a smaller proportion of average income than ever before, O. P. A. encouraged people to spread out, to occupy more space, and so the dwelling units occupied by one person increased 30 percent, and so on.

"O. P. A. made it so tough for the landlord to ever get rid of an undesirable tenant, that there must be millions of rooms which were formerly rented that are now used only as empty guest rooms, or as play rooms for the children."

"This may be fine for the occasional guest, but it is a wicked joke you have played on your G. I.'s returning from war. O. P. A. was good to those who weren't drafted to fight. It froze them in. It froze the G. I. out. Just another result of your fool efforts to repeal the law of supply and demand."

Thirty minutes later the great detective was winging his way back to London.

(Note: Holmes' visit to America was never permitted to be known. The Cabinet marked it "Top Secret").

AMBLER LOSES TO ST. ANN'S IN A CONFERENCE TILT

Local Eleven Wins Third Straight Game of The Season

FINAL SCORE IS 26 TO 6

"Saints" Outplayed Rivals In Every Period Except The First

AMBLER, Oct. 16—St. Ann's A. A. won its third straight game of the Northeast Philadelphia Conference, last night, walloping the Ambler A. A. team, 26-6, under the lights on the Ambler high school field.

Only in the first period did the Saints fail to outplay their foes. In the last three sessions, the team gained at will and made a total of 14 first downs, all on straight football plays.

In addition to the four touchdowns scored, the Saints missed three others when Massi, Plebani and Pizzullo all dropped passes while standing in the end zone of the Ambler team.

The losers could do little with the strong defense put up by the Bristol boys and most of the yardage gained by them, including their touchdown in the first quarter, was the result of passes. The Amblerites had a good pass receiver in "Charlie" Macort and a good ball-carrier in Curtis.

The Saints missed a scoring opportunity in the first quarter when Sak's boot was downed on the two-yard line. Ambler quickly booted out and Schreiner returned to the 20. On three plays, Schreiner carried the pigskin to the 7 and in four tries, the St. Ann's team could not push the ball over, reaching the Ambler 3 yard line.

But Ambler took advantage of its chance and registered a touchdown shortly before the close of the session. It began when Curtis intercepted a St. Ann's pass and ran to his 25 before he was dropped. A pass, Furman to Curtis was good for a first down at mid-field and after Curtis skirted end for a first down, Ambler was on St. Ann's 35. Curtis wheeled back and whipped a long pass to Macort who was spilled three yards away from the goal-line. Three line plays failed to net an inch but on the fourth try, Curtis rifled a short pass to Macort for the score.

Ambler held the 6-6 lead until mid-way in the second quarter when the Saints recovered a fumble on the 30. Two line plays netted a first down and a 15-yard penalty brought the ball to the 4-yard line. From here, "Hob" Merrill went over for the score and "Tommy" Profy place-kicked the extra point.

"Stan" Lelinski was partly responsible for the third St. Ann's score. Starting on their own 11, St. Ann's made a drive which netted four first downs in succession with Lelinski ripped off yard after yard. On one occasion, he got off with a 25-yard run. But the drive was stopped on the 15-yard line and started over when "Goops" Mangiaracina recovered a fumble. But the Saints could not score and Ambler got the ball and kicked out.

Late in the period, Curtis attempted a pass but "Jim" Spencer got in front of it and intercepted. The only man who could get Spencer was taken out of the play by "Danny" DeMidio and Spencer completed his 60-yard run. Profy converted the extra point to make the count, 20-6.

Keys had an opportunity to score in the final period when he intercepted a pass but with five men for interference, the St. Ann's back tripped and fell. But Lelinski carried on from the 40 and brought the ball to the 1-foot line where Brescia went over the quarterback sneak. Sak missed the try for the extra point.

In the closing minutes of the game, Mike Chichilietti recovered a fumble on Ambler's 18. Nate Chichilietti threw a pass over the goal-line to Massi who caught the ball and then dropped it.

St. Ann's will play its fourth game of the Conference Sunday afternoon, meeting Urulah on the home field.

the Yorkshire Worsted Mill in Lenni, Delaware County.

Harry Junod, the driver, said that as he entered the truck cab, he found himself face to face with an armed man.

Junod, a part-owner of the Junod Freight Lines, told authorities he was forced to drive to a lonely spot not far from the mill, where he was bound hand and foot and dumped by the roadside.

Boardman identified the armed man as Edward Scheinkofer, 29, of Philadelphia.

Meanwhile, an automobile had trailed the truck, Boardman continued. It was driven, he alleged, by Louis Factor, who reportedly aided Scheinkofer in trussing up Junod.

The truck was then driven to the isolated Bucks County barn, where most of the loot was stowed away. Factor and Scheinkofer were being held in the Delaware County Prison, and will be arraigned on charges of highway robbery.

Hold in $1500 bail each by U. S. Commissioner Norman J. Griffin for further hearings Oct. 24, were Harry Jerome, 30, a taxicab driver; Meyer Ingeman, 30; his sister-in-law, Dora Ingeman, 30; Albert Lieberman; Harry Shafer and his wife, Dorothy Lieberman and the Shafers, agents said, operate a grocery store at Fairmount, Avenue and 46th street, where part of the loot was recovered.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Allen Dunckley, Newportville Road and Garrett Avenue, Bensalem Township, on October 7th, in Nazareth Hospital, Philadelphia. The baby has been named Allen J. Dunckley. Mrs. Dunckley returned to her home on Sunday, the baby, who weighed but three pounds at birth, remaining in an incubator at the hospital. Mrs. Dunckley is the former Miss Catherine Meace.

Members of the William Penn Fire Co., Ladies' Auxiliary and their friends are invited to view motion pictures of Bucks County fires, which Bucks County Fire Marshal Raymond Strunk will show in the fire station at eight o'clock on Saturday evening. There will also be other entertainment, and refreshments will be served.
